Living on Yoder 3rd for two years was quite an experience. Though most of the rumors and stories accumulated have been fabricated, there never seemed to be a dull moment. Being the loudest, dirtiest, and most mischievous floor on campus brought on a lot of attention. And when the college found it necessary to send security to patrol the floor, it never failed that Bruce Miller would be seen walking our halls.

Bruce is an icon for current and past...

Bruce acquired a unique friendship with our floor because of his sincerity and kindness. Whether it be at a sporting event, in a study lounge, or in the Union, Bruce always had time for everyone and always asked how we were doing. We could joke with him (like the time we filled his cart with leaves), ask him for advice, or talk about any issue on . . .

For your average older Mennonite, dancing is not something he or she remembers doing on a Friday night as a young adult. As a large group of us headed to a dance club in Elkhart one Friday night, I couldn't help but think how these older conservative Mennonites would never have gotten away with what we were doing — but it was just dancing — right?

A very diverse group of us entered the innocent dance club, ready to have some good clean fun. But were we really ready for what we were about to experience? Waiting in line to pay for our night of fun, we watched an adolescent boy get frisked to ensure no firearms were entering the building. The bouncer instructed us to spit out our gum and empty our pockets.

A junior high feeling engulfed us as we walked through the door. As we joined the mass of pre-driver's license teenagers dancing to the blaring techno-dance music, I couldn't help but wonder how some . . .

Concentrating on perfecting our latest dance moves, all of us seemed to somehow soon forget how dumb we first felt at this teen dance club. We forgot about the pre-teens embarrassing themselves all around us. We forgot about the fifteen-year old boy that asked one of my friends to dance. We forgot about the little dishes of popcorn & mints set out at the tables adjacent to the dance floor that made us feel like we were at a junior high sock hop. We were having fun. And I'd like to think that if those older Mennonites would have had the same opportunity, they would have had a great time too.

Writing about what the word, "service," means to me is quite difficult. I'll try to answer this, but I'm not sure I'm doing this correctly.

First of all, leaving here is going to be one of the most difficult - if not the most difficult things I've had to do in my entire life. I feel like my family loves me so much, and I love them, and how in the world do I leave them behind like this? I have to come back here. I HAVE TO. The only way I can leave is to leave knowing that I can come back . . .

... I guess the reason why it's so difficult for me to answer what service means to me is because I, in many ways, don't feel like I've done service to others, but rather that others have done service for me. I have learned incredible things — how to communicate well in Spanish, how to show love, and how to help. Others taught me how to do these things; I don't really feel like I taught others.

I guess, though, one thing really hit me the other day when I had to say good-bye to my friend, Angelo. Angelo was a Dominican who had lived in New York City for five months during his late teens...

. . . Celebrating thirty years of tradition . . .

...He came back home to the Dominican Republic as soon as he had enough money to buy a plane ticket, because of the unhappiness he had felt there. Every native-born American he met there, he told me, exhibited an attitude toward him of self-centeredness and contempt, because of his ethnicity. Angelo said to me, as I was leaving, "Because of you, I now know that there are good, kind Americans." And, if I can just show someone something as simple as that, that makes me happy.

THE GOSHEN PLAN

Major Elements of the Goshen Plan

A. The Study-Service Trimester (SST) is an intercultural laboratory for general education--fourteen weeks of living in an underdeveloped foreign culture of the Western Hemisphere, with about seven weeks spent in getting acquainted with the culture through lectures, usually by native specialists, field trips, seminars, intensive language study and collateral reading and seven weeks in a PAX, VS or Peace Corps type of service.

SST Teams will be comprised of 12-20 students and one faculty couple. The members will normally live with a family of the host country.

In establishing the SST, the faculty voted its conviction that the educated man and the effective Christian of the future must be "interlocked"--set free from his genealogical, denominational or national tribe to join the world-wide tribe in which there is "no east nor west, neither Jew nor Greek. ..."

. . . Remembering Carnegie Hall . . .

. . . Finding music inside ourselves . . .

. . . From out in the hall, one last bit of conversation penetrates my cinder-block dungeon. "Hey Kate! Know what, Kate?" "What, Matt?" "Do you know what else el saw tonight, Kate?" "No, Matt, what did you see?" "El-el-el saw the angels, Kate! And they were singing!"

Something about that last statement jars me from my declension plot reverie. El glances at Lisa; she didn't hear him.

"Kate, hey Kate, y-you know why they were singing?" "Why, Matt?" "You know why, Kate?" "Why, Matt?" "Because Jesus was there, Kate! With Mary and Joseph and the sheep a-a-and the shepherds Jesus was there, Kate! He was real little, a real little baby. El-el-el saw Jesus tonight, Kate!"

El sat there, once more staring at the tree. Why couldn't el have made time to listen? El wonder if Lisa heard. The angels were singing! Jesus was there.

. . . Closing the gap . . .

A friend once suggested to me that my year in America could very well be the highlight of my life. I had always associated America with Hollywood Movies I saw in Kenya. My image of America was one which began and ended in cities like New York and Chicago. A little town like Goshen never even crossed my mind as a possibility.

It was not long before I entered the reality of American Culture. Eggs and sausage for ~~breakfast~~, Cheese, Jell-O, Cereals, taking the car everywhere - even a walking distance - and the strange American English accent all became common to me. My experience has been different, not only...

One of the most difficult adjustments that I had to endure in Goshen was the Cold Weather. In the autumn when temperatures first fell below Fifty degrees, I thought it was terribly cold.

My Coworkers all laughed because they knew the Coming Winter air could be much colder. True to their predictions, the Winter Season Finally started and the temperature dropped below zero.

I was disappointed, Confused excited and fascinated by these Strange Weather Conditions. At times I regretted My decision to Come to this Cold and Strange Country. But after experiencing my first Snowfall on a Saturday Morning, I was Shown again why I Came to America-to experience the Unimaginable.

IN A SMALL TOWN NEAR BANGKOK, THAILAND
DECEMBER 16

Last night I went out to dinner with Sen and her friend Piju. To reach the restaurant we wandered through a small jungle path on foot. Small monkeys, curious and perhaps a bit hungry, lept from the trees and hopped around on the path before us. We sat on a dock built over a river. Sen and her friend spent a lot of time talking together in Thai because Piju only knew a handful of words in English. I watched the sun set over the water and wrote on a pink napkin while they were talking:

Without free speech, what kind of personality can one have?
I am confined to Hello, delicious, thank you,
Good bye.
And yet I made this journey to be with you
and share this coconut tree learning about the local tongue.

. . . Taking time to create . . .

Black and White

Black and white etching,
with your folds of 16th century cloth
of a philosopher or god–

Whispering muse, you flow through my fingertips
when I paint my portraits of fierce dancers with cubist faces.

Tell me–do you come when the world is not well?
Do you come when the bell
Tolls?

Bacchus, you merry sprite,
fattened on your grapes
blushing with your wine

Do you dance in the wilderness of Hebron or in the tropical mountains of Guatemala?
Tell me Bacchus, tell me muse–

Will you stay in my blood when my skin wrinkles,
dancing to my merriment if my plate is empty,
if my hands are empty?

Where is the poet of starvation?
Where is the etching that whispers to the woman searching for water?

I tap into a water reserve from Apollo's mountain where I can water my hands and eyes with truth.
I'm dying of thirst, here beside the fountain.

There is truth in collecting potatoes.
A fine walk to the well, sweaty journey and muddy water.

. . . Seeking challenge . . .

Like most young kids growing up in the basketball-crazed state of Indiana, I dreamt of one day playing college basketball. My whole basketball career had been planned out as a youngster – I would go to Indiana University and star for Coach Bobby Knight. Beating archrival Purdue would be the norm, ESPN would marvel at my abilities, and the NBA would be my future employment.

Then reality hit. There were not many slow, non-athletic, 6'3" post players playing division I basketball. I was a good high school player, but Bobby and the Hoosiers never came knocking on my door. Many coaches and fellow teammates told me that I could not even play . . .

As I entered my senior season, I had accomplished a lot at the high school level and college coaches were starting to notice my desire to play college basketball. Throughout the recruiting process there was one particular coach who showed a lot of interest in me and I will always be thankful for the opportunity he gave me. He told me that if I worked hard and played the game with heart that I could become a successful college basketball player. It didn't matter that I was undersized and lacked . . .

Working hard

• • • God - given ability. I then realized my dream had become true when I signed a letter of intent to attend Goshen College.

Every day that I put my GC uniform on, I respected the game and played with a passion. Since I have been at GC, my teammates and I have accomplished many feats. We have resurrected a program that desperately needed a boost, and have re-written many individual and team records. But most importantly, we have all realized a common dream that was made possible at GC.

I volunteered with the GC Pre-Med club at Grahen General Hospital for the fall '98 term. Before this, I volunteered with an ambulance program in Central Oregon. During nearly a decade of voluntary service, I provided medical attention to hundreds of children a year. I saw everything, ranging from sprained ankles to avulsed palms. After awhile, I began to contemplate doing this for the rest of my life. But, I saw the medical profession as this monolithic facade, unscaleable by all but the very elite. Oliver Sacks says otherwise, "The average person can be a doctor; it doesn't require the abilities of a physicist. It is as much about perseverence and social skills as it is about 'scientific' knowledge."

I want to be able to say that my life made a difference for someone that I helped. People need each...

...other; in isolation we wither and die. I wish to be like Albert Schweitzer, an older student with a vision of service to humanity. What price will I pay for this idealism?

Well, here I am in Goshen General's Emergency room, late at night; no major trauma, just another sliced scalp, lots of blood. It will take a few stitches. I have just put clean, white linen on the bed again, right after the stitching's done. The cycle goes on, as inexorable as birth and death. The doctor is asking for my help to move the patient. He has never spoken to me before, even though I have been volunteering for several months) I feel a little awkward, a little edgy – I want to bridge the barrier here – ask questions, but I suddenly feel very shy. I feel like I know a lot about medical practice, it's the subject side of the process that's a little gray for me. I find myself wondering, what causes this gulf ...

...between the doctor and the nursing staff, why don't they communicate socially?

The nurse comes over and asks me, "How is school going?"

"Not too bad," I reply. "I do miss sleep sometimes, but finals will be over soon."

"Are you sure you want to be doctor? You could be a nurse and save some of your humanity... Besides, it is a lot shorter program and not nearly as expensive."

"I'll think about it. Uh, thanks I guess," I reply tentatively.

I'm tired and thinking I have several hours worth of homework waiting for me when I get back to Coffman. They call to me, "Hey Dave, have some cake, it's John's birthday."

"Thanks, maybe next time, I've years of studying left.

The first time I went through the hot food line at Marriott. The first time I attended a campus activity. The first time I collected my mail from the post office. The first time I didn't have to tell my parents where I was going "on a school night." The first time really being away from home. The first year experience. I can't say I've ever experienced anything quite like it. I always thought I was ready for college - ready to be out on my own, to be independent, to have my own rules, and to get a fresh new start in life. I can't say it was all that easy.

Moving in the first day was exciting. I was thrilled to be here on this new journey. But after my parents had gone and the initial buzz of independence had worn off, I realized I felt like a little kid. I wanted my mommy...

The freshman orientation activities were just another emphasizer of how alone I really felt. No one had any friends yet. I felt like I was at summer camp. We all came from different parts of the country and even the world. We each had different ideas. Different experiences. Different needs...

But throughout all of those Frosh getting-to-know-each-other games, new classes, and late nights of chatting with each other, we soon came to realize that we weren't so different after all. Many of us missed our family & friends from home. We all felt lonely at times. We wanted to fit in... to feel accepted... not to be easily identified as a frosh. At least we weren't prospectives anymore with Admissions folders under our arms, wandering aimlessly around campus, and wearing our high school letter jackets.

MELBERN AND RACHEL GINGERICH—OWNERS

For me, one of the issues that I struggled with before coming to Goshen College was religion because it is a Christian College. Rather than running away from truth, I tried to figure out the ways that I could adjust here and really belong; because I knew that this was going to be my "home away from home."

I was raised in a Hindu family although I was also exposed to Buddhism from my surroundings. I had no idea what Christian values were like and how is it to live among the people of a totally different faith and practice. It was indeed a challenge to live in such a new...

Everyone has a story and something to say. It is through stories and sharing our experiences that others get to know us. Included in this book are handwritten personal essays by seven diverse students about their stories. Some you see yourself in, and others do not pertain to your experience. They not only give you insight into these seven lives, but also, hopefully, to the common student – you, the person across the hall, the guy who sits across from you in Bib. Lit. and the gal who borrowed your pen in the library.

Everyone has a story.
This is the GC story.

... environments and I would have been more nervous at the time if I had thought about living with a room-mate whose whole soul was occupied by Christian values.

As I saw her nurturing her individual Christian values, I became more aware of my own religious roots and values. I saw her being deeply involved in various activities like going to church frequently, worshipping and participating in Evening Song. Prayer etc I was observing her way of life and understanding what kind of values she cherished that led her to lead the kind of life that was full of devotion and mission...

... Seeing the way she made her faith a part of her life influenced by spirituality a lot. I began to ponder over my own religious values that I held and the way I applied in my daily life. The awakening experience I felt while living with my roommate will always remind me of her faith and how she had her influence on me. My faith has not been hurt or crumbled at all, but revitalized by seeing someone who believes in a different manner than me.
